Any other suggestions

Practical training: The alums have asserted that there is a need for practical training, which includes moot court sessions, court visits, and internships to expose the students to grassroots situations on the ground.

Curriculum Update: Alumnii suggested that there should be a regular updating of the curriculum, in keeping with the changes in laws and rules, and including new subjects and topics of relevance to the profession.

Improved job prospects: Respondents from the alumni expressed the need for more emphasis on clinical learning and internships in order to attain better job prospects.

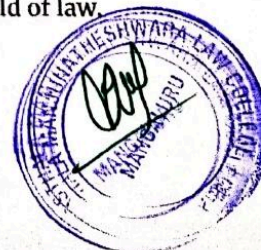

Increasing participation in moot court: The suggestions provided by the alumni were to make participation in moot court sessions compulsory and increasing the number of sessions.

Invite guest lectures: The alumni suggested that practicing advocates should be invited for guest lectures to provide an industry-institution interface for better understanding of the practical fields.

Pressure on university: The alumni called upon the university administration to undertake pressing upon the government for changing the subjects and removing repealed laws from the curriculum.

The alumni feedback brings to the fore the fact that practical training, updating of the syllabus, and emphasis on clinical learning and internships is necessary so that a student can be groomed towards a successful career in the field of law.

This data suggests that 100% of parents (30/30) participate in the admission process of their ward.

Any other suggestions -

- 1. Location and Accessibility: The parents are not from Mangalore. Hence, they cannot meet the mentor frequently.*
- 2. Teacher Quality and Teaching Style: Some teachers keep changing frequently; therefore, adjusting to the teaching style of these teachers is a bit tough for the students. Some teachers' accents are also not clear, which becomes difficult to follow by the students.*
- 3. Teaching Methods: The parents are of the view that the college should bring in some new laws and teaching methods, like moot court, for better learning.*
- 4. Facilities and Study Environment: The parents demand more facilities in the college to study in a group.*
- 5. Support System: The management and faculty members are really very supportive to the holistic development of the students, which is a plus point for the institution.*

In summary, the feedback from parents ranges from some points to be improved regarding the quality of teachers and teaching methodology to general appreciation for the supportive atmosphere of the college towards its students and a positive learning environment.

Do you find any drawbacks in present syllabus?

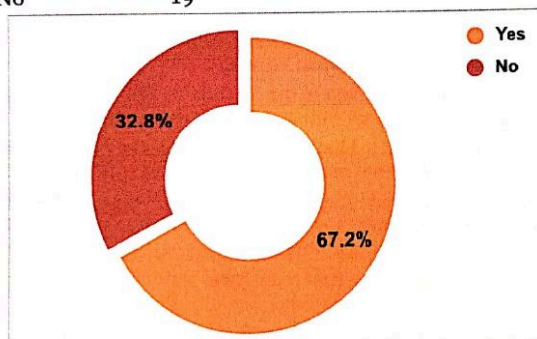

Yes 28
 No 30

Out of the 58 students, 28 of them point out the drawbacks in the current syllabus, thus showing that there is much room for improvement. The major causes of dissatisfaction for students are basically based on the curriculum content that is still very outdated, scanty coverage of relevant topics, and unsatisfactory teaching methods.

Is the system of continuous evaluation satisfactory?

Yes 39
 No 19

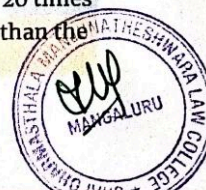

For the majority of students - 39, this system of continuous assessment is quite satisfactory. In general terms, this would mean that perception is good, but it corresponds to a high percentage - 19, that does not share this opinion, which leaves some concerns or those areas for improvement in the evaluation process.

What are the teaching/learning methods needed?

The feedback received shows that the following are the most frequent methods of teaching/learning adopted:

- Chalk and Talk Method — 30 times
- Case Study Method — 23 times
- Discussion Method — 20 times

The Socrates Method is mentioned on several occasions, but less frequent than the other two.

The analysis shows that more than one method of teaching/learning is adopted in practice. The common combinations are:

Chalk and Talk Method + Case Study Method + Discussion Method — 13 times

Chalk and Talk Method + Discussion Method (8 times)

Chalk and Talk Method + Case Study Method (6 times)

The Socrates Method is often used in combination with other methods, particularly with the Case Study Method and the Discussion Method.

The least used method is the sole use of the Discussion Method, which only appeared 3 times.

It can be analysed that, the findings suggests teachers often combine teaching/learning methods for the achievement of instructional goals. Some of the commonly used methods include the Chalk and Talk Method, the Case Study Method, and the Discussion Method, which in most cases are used in a mix with one another.

What are the changes you suggest in practical training Courses?

Suggestions -

1. Reduce writing tasks: Most of the students are of the opinion that the quantum of writing is too heavy and sometimes unwarranted. The simplification of writing tasks or the number of written assignments may be reduced.
2. Student satisfaction survey: A survey may be conducted regarding the satisfaction levels among the students about the practical training course. This will help to improve the shortcomings.
3. More practical knowledge: The students want to be taught practical things related to the application of the course materials and how to apply the rules and regulations in real life.
4. Friendlier lecturers: The students desire to have more understanding lecturers who are friendly and accessible both in and out of class.
5. Do away with unnecessary work: Removal of such additional work as the requirement to keep a personal diary will save time for more critical activities.
6. Addressing student needs: The faculty should respond to the requirements and issues of students and must think from the student's perspective.
7. Syllabus-based teaching is necessary: The faculty should cover the syllabus and mention all the essential points for answering the questions so that students can prepare well before the examination.
8. Bilingual: Teaching in multiple languages, such as Kannada, may help students grasp concepts more clearly.
9. Real life situations: More practical examples and case studies in the practical training courses to help students comprehend how theory can be applied in practice.
10. Mandatory visits to courts: Make court visits mandatory for the students and encourage them to think and reflect upon their experiences.

Analysis -

Suggestions from students proposed 10 changes that will help better practical training courses. They are reducing writing tasks, survey on student satisfaction, providing more practical knowledge, friendly instructors, avoiding unnecessary tasks; meeting the student needs, teaching in accordance with the syllabus; instruction in multiple languages; investigation of real-world scenarios; and visiting courts compulsorily.

The institution recognizes achievements of alumni, and a strong majority of 37 respondents agreed to that, showing it does support the development of a sense of community and pride among alumni.

Is the syllabus of the University in tune with market requirements?

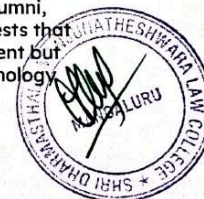

While 30 respondents agreed, 13 disagreed with the statement that the syllabus of the university is in tune with market requirements. It may basically mean that the overall syllabus is well done and there are few areas of enhancement or fine-tuning.

Suggestions -

- Arrangement of constructive dialogues should be made to promote intellectual excellence.
- More sessions on basic computer skills to be included in order that the students may come out with knowledge regarding E-filing in courts.
- More alums ought to be involved with the institution.

The feedback points out that the alumni network is an area to be improved within the institution. The Alumni Association is also weak and has not engaged with most alumni, which could be a big miss in networking and knowledge sharing. The feedback suggests that as an institution, it does well in terms of academic excellence and student involvement but leaves much to be desired regarding engagement with alumni and infusion of technology into the curriculum.

Faculty Feedback

FACULTY FEEDBACK ANALYSIS 2022 - 2023

Do you think the subject prescribed is satisfactory for professional learning?

Yes 12
No 2

Twelve of the fourteen respondents agreed that the prescribed subject is satisfactory for professional learning. This goes to prove that the curriculum meets the needs of the students and gives them substantial education in the field of law.

What are the draw backs you see in the present syllabus?

Lack of categorization and relevance of topics
Lack of insight into the subject area.
Suggestion Received - Non-practical and non-professional orientation of all the subjects
Laws are outdated and lack updates on the syllabus
The cases in professional ethics are not updated
Some of the chapters are too complex for the students to comprehend.

Analysis -

The present syllabus is under criticism because of its lack of proper structure, remoteness from practice, and not updating the laws and cases therein. This may result in an insufficient understanding of complex ideas and a superficial knowledge of the subject by the students.

What are the changes you suggest in clinical legal education?

Current practice in courts: Include mock trials and negotiation mutes and client counseling mutes to bring into focus actual scenes.

Early Clinical Legal Education: Appropriate all-round clinical legal education in students would imply that beginning in the first year, all students are entitled to participate in clinical legal education in their locality.

Suggestion Summary - More practical exposure: The students emphasize the need for practical knowledge and exposure.

In Moot Court and DPC, give more control to students with reduced guidance from teachers.

Continuous Mock Trials: Implement continuous mock trials, which enhance the skills of the students.

Court Visits: Organize visits to courts during the last two years of study so that students can be exposed to this environment.

Analysis : These changes emphasize practical knowledge and the representation of what has been truly practiced in court, increasing student autonomy and constant exposure to legal scenarios.

What changes are required in the teaching pedagogy ?

Increased use of IT: There is a general agreement among most respondents that technology should be used more extensively in teaching, which virtually implies that the digital tools aid in enhancing learning.

Practical-oriented learning: Most responses agree that the weight in learning should focus more on practical learning, which literally means students should participate in practical activities and experiments to aid the understanding of theoretical concepts.

Focus on academics: This is focusing on academics other than extra-curricular activities according to the respondents, which means there should be a focus on academic achievement.

Suggestion
Summary -

Attention to student preparation: It is suggested by some of the respondents that students have to be prepared to learn; they are provided with previous readings and encouraged to join the discussions in groups. This shows the responsibilities of the students as an active learner.

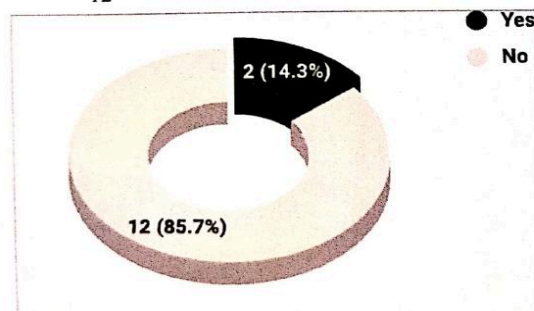

Sharing knowledge rather than completing the syllabus: Some of the respondents opined that the aim of teaching should be to share the knowledge with the students, rather than merely completing the syllabus, which again goes on to hint that deep learning rather than mere coverage is what should be emphasized.

Experiment with several teaching methods: Some of the respondents contributed that all methods of teaching need to be experimented with on a trial and error basis to find what works best.

These responses show the necessity for innovation and flexibility in pedagogy, which must be oriented toward students' engagement, learning outcomes, and academic achievement.

Are you involved in academic bodies of the University?

Yes	2
No	12

Most of the respondents, 12, are not involved in any academic bodies of the university, which includes non-engagement in the academic governance and decision-making frameworks. Only 2 are active, hence indicating low influence on the academic environment.

What are the changes you suggest in practical training Courses?

Specific suggestions:

Group assignments: The students have suggested formation of groups and assignment of practical tasks to ensure teamwork and cooperation.

Case studies and assignments: The students wish to solve case studies and assignments to apply theoretical knowledge in practical scenarios.

More interactive classes: The students have suggested offline classes, workshops, and classes with eminent personalities in the field of law.

Explanation and communication to be clear: The students have demanded clear explanation, simpler methods of teaching, and improved communication from teachers.

Practical sessions and workshops: The students expressed their need for more practical sessions and workshops so that they can learn more by doing things on their own.

Notes in both languages: Students demand study materials, notes in both English and Kannada languages.

Analysis -

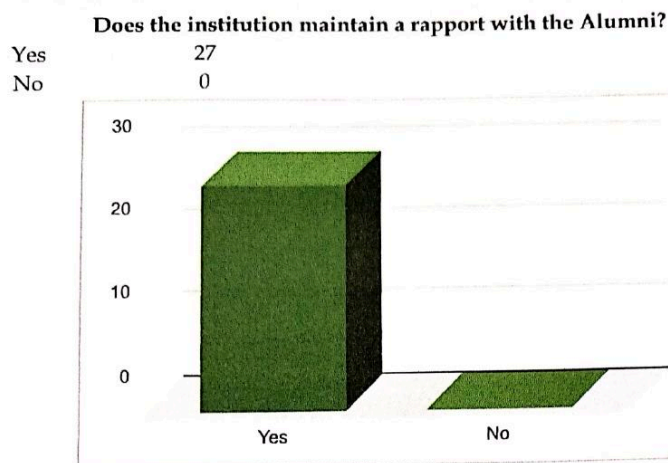

The feedback indicates that students want something more engaging, practical, and relevant to the real-world application of the law. Suggestions may be used to further develop the courses of practical training, thus achieving improved student learning outcomes.

Faculty Feedback

Feedback Analysis Faculty
2021 - 2022
Do you think the subject prescribed is satisfactory for professional learning?
Yes	13
No	4
Thirteen strongly agree that the prescribed subject is satisfactory for professional learning, thus showing a general acceptance and confidence in the topic chosen. A notable minority of four showed dissatisfaction, an indication of maybe areas of improvement or other topics that could better serve professional development needs.
What are the draw backs you see in the present syllabus?
Suggestion Summary -	Lacking in practical relevance and depriving students of proper preparation for life after their studies.
	The overemphasis on theoretical knowledge, therefore, makes it rather very difficult to be applied in real-world situations.
	Obsolete and repealed content incorporation, irrelevant therefore may fail to be of use to students.
	Not much emphasis is given to advanced, practical law courses by the university, making it difficult for a student to get into the intricacies of the subject.
	Extraneous subjects and irrelevance to practical application in some fields, for example, jurisprudence.
Analysis -
The existing syllabus of the law course is criticized as having no practical relevance, with its contents outdated and emphasis more on the traditional and theoretical rather than advanced and practical aspects, which makes it very difficult for the student to prepare for real-world legal practices and for a master's program.
What are the changes you suggest in clinical legal education?
Suggestion Summary -	Attention to the practical education of our semester.
	Increased court and chamber visits to increase practical experience.
	Participation in legal services through DLSA and compulsory legal aid camps.
	Practical exercises and projects aimed at enhancing student skills.
	Incorporate human rights-based training and separate hours for practical training.
Analysis : The clinical legal training reform provides for skill-based practical approaches, more exposure to live cases, and human rights-based training, among others. This transforms clinical legal training from an approach of theoretical development to a more practical application making the student well-prepared for professional practice and a more holistic view of law.

What changes are required in the teaching pedagogy?
Suggestion Summary -	Discussion and reflection should be encouraged.
	Project-based and problem-based learning.
	Infusion of technology and soft skills.
	Quizzes, group discussions, and presentations can be conducted.
	Focus on participative teaching and research-oriented learning.
The following suggestions are toward a more student-centered, technology-integrated, research-oriented approach.
Are you involved in academic bodies of the University?
Yes	3
No	14
The analysis shows that out of 17, only 3, which is 18%, are engaged in the academic bodies of the university, showing their engagement to be at a moderate level.
Any other Suggestion -
Suggestion Summary -	Technology integration: The respondents opined that the law colleges should provide better technological facilities to the students for making their learning more student-friendly.
	Teachers autonomy: Respondents generally tend to hold the view that teachers must be allowed some amount of autonomy with respect to their methods of teaching and be left free to try out new approaches for exploring student thinking.
	More attention to academics: Most of the respondents were of the view that more emphasis should be laid on academics, and preparatory exams should compulsorily be conducted in order to prepare the students well.
	Contemporary topics: The respondents opined that guest lectures, seminars, and conferences shall be organized on topics of contemporary relevance so that students remain interested and updated.
	Filling lacunae in curriculum: The respondents have suggested that some add-on courses should be introduced to fill the lacunae in the present university syllabus to ensure comprehensive education among students.
The opinions and comments of the respondents are built around improvements in the academic and learning environment within law colleges. Expressions have been made for better access to technological developments for the students, autonomy for the teachers, and more concentration on increasing academics. Some of the concrete suggestions are the making of preparatory exams mandatory, selection of contemporary topics for guest lectures, and introduction of add-on courses to fill the lacuna of the university syllabus.

Students Feedback

count - 341

Feedback by Students Analysis 2020 - 21

Is the syllabus professional / Market oriented?

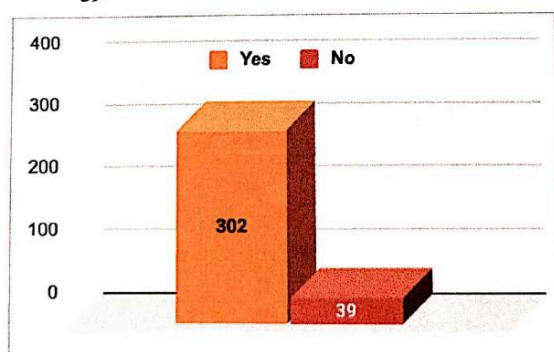

Yes 257
No 84

The syllabus is considered professional and market-oriented. A high percentage of students, 75.7% (257 out of 341), agree that it is relevant to the industry, while only 24.7% (84 of 341) disagree, indicating a tight link between the curriculum and professional demand.

Is the system of continuous evaluation satisfactory?

Yes 302
No 39

The system of continuous evaluation is largely satisfactory, with 302 students, about 88.6 percent, indicating "Yes," and 39 students, about 11.4 percent, showing dissatisfaction. This goes on to prove that the present evaluation system is very effective in measuring the progress and understanding of the student.

The majority of students want to have a more interactive and collaborative learning experience (140 out of 341). In other words, what students want is an opportunity to share, with peers, ideas around and develop their critical aids, which in turn develops the requirement for critical thinking and skills in thinking through their practice.

The fact that the number of students relatively smaller (60 out of 341) in mention of recommending the need of the chalk and talk method may show that they may feel that it is too lenient and does not offer the necessary stimulation and consultation.

The high number of students, 141 out of the total 341, suggesting the need for the Socratic method reflects that opportunities to critique ideas are important to them.

What are the draw backs you see in the present syllabus?

- Common answers :
- Overemphasis on theoretical aspects
 - Lack of practical skills and project-based learning
 - Insufficient assessment methods and feedback
 - High stress levels and inadequate support for students with mental health issues and disabilities
 - Limited focus on innovation, critical thinking, and soft skills development
 - Inadequate provision of resources and rigid curriculum
 - Overemphasis on memorization and multiple-choice tests
 - Limited opportunities for hands-on learning, group work, and student contributions

most of them refer to practical skills and project-based learning, as well as assessment methods and feedback. It would therefore mean that students feel the syllabus is too inclined towards theoretical aspects and does not afford students with enough hands-on learning experience and practical applications.

The next most prevalent issues that appeared were the high levels of stress and unsatisfactory support for students with mental health and disability issues. This would mean students feel burdened by curriculum demands and have less-than-satisfactory support to keep their well-being in check.

Of the other deficiencies, 6 of 34 were related to a lack of emphasis on innovation, critical thinking, and soft skills development, as well as a lack of opportunities for group work and individual contributions by students. In some ways, this may be taken as suggesting that the students feel the syllabus is over-individualistic, with insufficient scope for collaboration and creativity.

In general, much of the feedback seemed to indicate a desire for more interactive and student-centered learning that would allow students to work with one another, develop ideas, and further acquire and hone their critical thinking and communication skills.

Is the syllabus of the University in tune with market requirements?

Suggestions -

Most of the respondents agree that the Alumni Association contributes to academic development and administrative development of the institution.

Results indicate that the majority of the respondents agree that the institution recognizes Alumni achievements.

The frequency of the Alumni meeting is mostly annual.

Some respondents are not sure about the rapport between the institution and Alumni or how frequent the Alumni meetings are.

One of the respondents suggested that the institution could leverage forging of MoUs with the industry partners for better quality in academics and research.

Another response says there are "lots of changes to be made" but does not give any examples of what the changes might be.

Analysis -

The majority of the respondents have lauded good feedback regarding the institution's relationship with Alumni and their contributions toward the academic and administrative development processes. Of concern, however, would be the comments to do with the frequency of Alumni meetings and, generally, rapport with Alumni. Some potential areas for improvement are provided by the suggestions, such as strengthening industry partnerships and effecting changes in the institution's processes.

Do you suggest any changes in online teaching

From your responses, it seems that you are advocating several changes online instruction. Based on this, here are the recommendations you put across:

Suggestions -

Flexible scheduling of courses would imply that online classes should show more flexibility in terms of meeting the different schedules and time zones.
Technical Support: This means that the online education platforms should provide technical support in case of any technical difficulties, both to the learners and the instructor. These suggestions have been two practical and useful ones to make improvements in online teaching.
